MTA HUMAN AND CIVIL RIGHTS AWARDS

Do you know an individual or a group in your local, school or community deserving of recognition for:

- Promoting equal opportunity for women and people of color?
- Improving the lives of people traditionally excluded by society?
- Helping to eliminate racism and sexism?
- Demonstrating creativity in providing and improving opportunities for children, families and underserved members of the community?
- Promoting an appreciation of diversity?
- Community service and volunteerism?

The MTA Human and Civil Rights Awards were established in 1983 to recognize individuals and groups working to advance civil rights and human relations. The awards are named for two longtime MTA members whose lives and legacies reflect their extraordinary dedication, perseverance and idealism.

- LOUISE GASKINS LIFETIME CIVIL RIGHTS AWARD — This award is named for Louise Gaskins, a pioneer for the involvement of women and people of color in education, the Massachusetts Teachers Association and the National Education Association. Nominees for this award should embody the qualities of humility, leadership and tenacity that Louise Gaskins has brought wherever she has served.
- KATHLEEN ROBERTS CREATIVE LEADERSHIP AWARD — This award is named for Kathleen Roberts, a former MTA president whose extraordinary commitment to service made her a tireless advocate for public education, communities and the profession of educators. Nominees for this award should exemplify the volunteerism and leadership that characterized Kay Roberts' selfless contributions through political action, community organizing and mentoring.

The MTA will make a substantial charitable donation in the name of each recipient.

Award recipients will be recognized at the Human Relations Committee's 2022 Awards Banquet on Friday, June 17. Please plan to attend this year's awards ceremony — and encourage your local and school colleagues to join you!
